Bending the Aging Curve

Women respond to many callings -- those of family and home, work and colleagues, and ministry and discipleship. Dunnam Reisman, a working mother of three, explores how to respond from a calm center rather than from frustration and exhaustion. The author suggests that readers work from a Christ-centeredness that asks How do I make choices that reflect my relationship with Christ? rather than, How can I juggle my many responsibilities? By unmasking dangerous stereotypes and common traps many women fall into, Dunnam Reisman offers women ways to identify their true selves as disciples and explains how to place Christ at the center of their lives. Not just another how-to-get-organized book, The Christ-Centered Woman helps readers contemplate and prioritize their callings.

Handbook of Biomedical Engineering

In Britain, the period that stretches from the middle of the eighteenth century to the mid-nineteenth century marks the emergence of the working classes, alongside and in response to the development of the middle-class public sphere. This collection contributes to that scholarship by exploring the figure of the "working-class intellectual," who both assimilates the anti-authoritarian lexicon of the middle classes to create a new political and cultural identity, and revolutionizes it with the subversive energy of class hostility. Through considering a broad range of writings across key moments of working-class self-expression, the essays reevaluate a host of familiar writers such as Robert Burns, John Thelwall, Charles Dickens, Charles Kingsley, Ann Yearsley, and even Shakespeare, in terms of their role within a working-class constituency. The collection also breaks fresh ground in eighteenth- and nineteenth-century scholarship by shedding light on a number of unfamiliar and underrepresented figures, such as Alexander Somerville, Michael Faraday, and the singer Ned Corvan.
