Most of Georgia's women of the American Revolution found neither fame nor glory, only a legacy that survives, if at all, in fragments of records that illustrate the dangers faced by all. [10] For example, Fenda Lawrence was the African partner and mother of the children of Stephen Deane, an Irish sea captain in the African slave trade. During the war she moved with their children to Georgia

Things Not Seen is a first-person novel written by Andrew Clements and his third novel after Frindle and The Landry News. The story revolves around Bobby as he deals with his 'disease,' tries to get back to normal, and even befriends a blind girl. The title is apparently taken from Hebrews 11:1, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen" in the King James
